DAVID.

The promoter, ticketing platform and marketing engine for the middle of the live music market.

Raising £1m DAVID.TICKETS

Founded by the marketing companies behind Bad Bunny, Raye, Thundercat, The Pixies and Swedish House Mafia.

THE PROBLEM

Touring is broken.

Everybody in the chain is being milked – and the shows still don't sell.

Fans are gouged

Booking fees of 25% and up layered on at checkout – then dynamic pricing on top.

Artists get padded settlements

Towels.

Riders, reps, line items you never asked for and can't remove.

The promoter keeps the data

Not yours.

The artist builds the audience and walks away with nothing.

The marketing is a decade old

2015

Spend fixed low and blind – so tours get papered, cut down and cancelled.

The people who own live music make money whether or not the show sells. So it doesn't.

THE PROOF

When tours stop selling, their teams already call us.

The artists' teams bring us in. Both of these were Live Nation and AEG tours that had stopped selling. These shows we took on were sitting at 4–27% sell-through before our marketing started.

One campaign across every market, one learning loop — a winning creative in Glasgow is live in Paris the next morning.

THE INSIGHT

(Everyone makes money
when tickets sell)

THE INSIGHT

We sell more – and charge far less.

WHAT THE FAN PAYS ON TOP OF FACE VALUE

WHAT COMES OUT OF THE ARTIST'S SIDE

Ours is the only artist-side deduction, and costs come off at receipted actuals. Theirs comes off a net already padded to protect their take.

They win even half-empty, so the marketing never has to work. The artist wins on both sides.

THE MODEL

Our only cut of the artist's revenue is 7% of gross.

The old deal: pad the costs first, then take ~20% of what survives.

EXAMPLE SETTLEMENT · HOXTON HALL, 350 CAP

The artist takes home ~45% more.

Artist take-home as a share of gross potential, on the same show settled three ways.

THE SALES ENGINE

Their spend is cheaper. Their rooms are emptier.

Cost per ticket on its own is the wrong measure. £1.50 into a half-empty room is not value — it is a budget too small to work, spent on targeting built years ago.

AI routing

Dates land where the artist's own audience already is.

AI campaign engine

Creative, targeting and budget per city, driven to cost-per-ticket. Every market feeds one loop.

It compounds

The artist owns every buyer. This tour's audience is next tour's cheapest tickets sold.

WHY NOW

AI makes the middle market servable — for the first time.

Advancing, contracting, settlement, tax and campaign management used to cost more in human hours than a mid-size show could carry. That is why the middle market was abandoned to fragmented local promoters. That cost has collapsed.

4,129

shows a year, run by 10 people.

The Year-5 operating model — possible only because the machine does the advancing, the settlement and the marketing.

Streaming pays ~nothing

Touring is the income now — artists need every pound of it.

Transparency pressure

Fee-disclosure rules are tightening across the UK and EU.

THE BUSINESS

(A market nobody serves,
And a plan to serve it)

COMPETITION

Nobody else is paid to fill the room.

Ticketing platforms are a checkout — they sell to the people who are already coming. Promoters take the room and take the risk, but filling it falls to the artist: it is the artist's own socials, on the artist's own time, that do the marketing. Neither of them loses anything on a half-empty room.

	FILLS THE ROOM	ARTIST KEEPS THE DATA	ARTIST KEEPS THE UPSIDE
Ticketing Ticketmaster · AXS · DICE · See Tickets	No	No	No
Promoters Live Nation · AEG · local promoters	No	No	Partial
DAVID The marketing is the product	Yes	Yes	Yes

Ticketing earns on tickets and does nothing to sell them. Promoters take the risk and get paid either way, and leave the artist to market their own show. We are the only one doing both jobs — and at 7% of gross plus the booking fee, every ticket that goes unsold is our revenue too.

MARKET

The middle is most of live music — and nobody runs it at scale.

UK live sector GVA alone

£2.5bn

Europe is a multiple of the UK.

Attendance under 1,500 cap

55%

The middle isn't niche — it's the majority.

Annual revenue pool

£600m–1bn

No pan-European incumbent to displace.

David at Year 5 — £30.7m revenue from 4,129 shows — is roughly 3–5% of that pool, with no pan-European incumbent to displace. Nobody else can be the promoter, the ticketer and the marketing engine at once without cannibalising their own fees.

Sector figures: UK Music. The revenue pool is our own estimate — European middle-market gross box office of £3–5bn at our 20% take rate — and is the one number on this slide we have derived rather than sourced.

THE PLAN · BASE CASE, BUSINESS PLAN V5.1

£30.7m of revenue and 73% margins by Year 5.

We take 20% of gross box office — 13% from the fan as a booking fee, 7% from the artist. The margin comes from the operating model: the same ten people run four thousand shows as run four hundred, because the advancing, the settlement and the tax are machine work.

EBITDA-positive in April 2027, cash-generative from that August, on ten people at Year 5. Sensitivity runs from £10.2m to £61.5m of Year-5 revenue on the growth assumption alone.

GO TO MARKET

Agents own the relationships. AI does the work.

Five Tour Partnerships Managers — one genre space each, ex-booking-agent profile, already holding the relationships with managers and agents.

One point of contact for all of Europe — venue contracting, advancing, withholding tax, settlement and marketing, handled by the platform behind them.

Josh Ergatoudis, our first TPM, is in seat — a career booking agent who founded his own agency.

THE MATHS

3,000 shows a year
Two tours a month per agent.

TEAM

Founded by two marketing companies.

Their collective roster includes Bad Bunny, Raye, Thundercat, The Pixies, Swedish House Mafia and many others.

Co-CEO

PJ Jarrett

Founder of Sweat Strategies, Sweat Entertainment and Reel:lab. Technical lead — designed and built the David platform end to end.

Co-CEO

Tom Rose

CEO of Grape (formerly Propeller) — artist services across the UK, Germany and Norway: radio & PR, management, label services.

Co-founder · CMO

Tobi Steinborn

Co-founder of Sweat Strategies. Marketing lead — ran the campaigns behind Rules at £2.55 a ticket and 3,522 ADMT tickets at £2.59.

Tour Partnerships Mgr

Josh Ergatoudis

Career booking agent — founded his own agency before joining as the first of the five TPMs.

PJ and Tom each run a company turning over seven figures a year today. Between them they have spent their careers brokering the deals that put artists into these rooms — which is the part of this business that cannot be built, only known.

THE ASK

£1m to go loud.

It bankrolls the tours, the agent hires and the marketing. The platform is already built and already selling — this is runway, not a build budget.

Booking team

£420k

Five tour partnerships managers and a head of department. They are the constraint on how many tours we can carry.

Tour float

£230k

Show marketing goes out months before the box office settles. This is the working capital that lets us front it.

Market entry

£190k

Eurosonic, The Great Escape, ADE, Reeperbahn, IMS — and B2B marketing every month in between.

Product

£100k

Retained development and hosting. The platform is built and selling; this keeps it moving.

Licences & setup

£60k

FCA payments opinion, contract templates, and VAT and tax registration in every territory we sell in.

It is the last money we need. EBITDA-positive April 2027.
