No two platforms behave the same

All of it is there to convert. What changes is the campaign that gets you there.

Tickets, streams, subscribers, merch — every channel has an outcome we're driving somebody towards. What differs is the route. On some, spending straight at the sale is the cheapest way there. On others it's slower, or it's putting money behind what's already working and letting the sale follow. We buy each one the way that reaches the outcome for the least money, not the way that looks the most direct.

One team across every platform. Each one bought the way it actually works.

01

One operation

Streaming, live, TikTok, YouTube, merch and CRM, run by the same people against the same numbers.

02

Tested, not assumed

The same discipline behind every channel: many variants, cold audiences, and the winner takes the budget.

03

A single read

One place to see what every pound did, rather than four reports that count things differently.

04

An audience you own

Every campaign feeds a list you keep, not a follower count you rent.

WHAT WE RUN

Every channel, bought its own way.

Streaming | Live | Ticketing | TikTok | YouTube | Merch | CRM & fan flow

Paid media, the creative testing behind it, the ticketing if you want it, and the CRM that keeps what all of it buys. What follows is the streaming method first, because it is the one with the longest record behind it, then the same discipline everywhere else.

01 Find the sound

02 Test the content at scale

Dozens of variations per record, made by our editors, running against cold audiences in every market that matters.

03 Validate the cost

Every test returns a real cost per new listener. That number decides what gets the budget and what gets dropped.

04 Scale what converts

Budget follows the number, reallocated daily, country by country, for as long as it keeps paying.

PAID MEDIA · 01 OF 04

Live

Ticket sales, run as a campaign rather than a blast.

Tour advertising usually goes out the way it always has: a wall of spend at on-sale and another on pay-day weekend, against targeting that was built years ago and hasn't been questioned since. It sells the tickets that were going to sell anyway, at the price the auction happens to be that week, and tells you nothing about the rest of the room.

01

Tested content first

Creative tested the way we test a record, before any budget goes behind it.

02

Slower, steadier spend

Consistent pressure across the whole on-sale rather than two spikes and silence, ramped up at the moments that actually matter.

03

Read every day

Cold and warm funnels tracked apart, with hook rate, hold rate and conversion read daily — not after the show.

PAID MEDIA · LIVE · TICKETING

Ticketing

We can run the ticketing too, at no cost to the artist.

Through david.tickets we can take the ticketing itself. It costs the artist nothing, and it closes the loop the advertising opens: instead of waiting on someone else's weekly summary, the artist and the team get full access to their own ticket data — which is the way it should have worked all along.

01

No cost to the artist

The ticketing is handled at no cost to you.

02

Your data, in full

Live access for the artist and the team, not a report on somebody else's schedule.

03

One closed loop

The spend, the funnel and the sale all read in the same place, on the same day.

TikTok

Grow the audience on the content that is already working.

Audience targeting campaigns, pointed at the posts that have already earned attention on their own. Reach and audience growth is what the platform gives you, so that is what we buy — and where the record needs to be in other people's videos rather than in an ad, we seed it through our influencer networks instead.

01

Content that is already working

The budget goes behind posts that have proven they hold attention, not behind untested assets.

02

Audience targeting

Built to reach and grow the audience the post actually found, rather than a demographic guess.

03

Influencer seeding

Our own networks, for when the record needs to be in other people's videos rather than in an ad.

PAID MEDIA · 03 OF 04

YouTube

Engagement and reach, to generate traction.

The goal here is traction: a release being watched, held to the end and picked up. So that is what the campaigns are built to buy — enough of the right people in front of it, often enough, for it to start moving on its own.

01

Engagement campaigns

Built to get watched and interacted with, which is what the platform rewards.

02

Reach campaigns

Impressions against the audiences that matter, at the volume it takes to register.

Merch

Funnels, drops, and the store behind them.

A drop only works if the whole path behind it does, not just the ad pointing at it. We build and test the funnel end to end, plan and measure the drop, and manage the Shopify store the traffic lands on.

01

Funnels

Built and tested from the ad through to the checkout.

02

Drop optimisation

Planned, timed and measured, so a launch is not a single day of guessing.

03

Shopify store management

The store run as part of the work, not handed back as someone else's problem.

The audience you actually own

A follower is rented. An email address isn't.

Every platform decides who sees you and changes its mind without telling anyone. A list you built yourself is the only audience that survives that, and the only one you can reach on the day a record, a tour or a drop goes live.

So there is a capture underneath everything else in this deck. The paid media buys the attention; the CRM is what keeps it. Here is the flow we build, end to end.

CRM · THE FAN FLOW

From a new follower to a real conversation.

STEP 01

A new follower

Someone follows the account. That is the whole trigger — nothing has to be posted, sent or remembered.

STEP 02

An automatic DM

A message from the artist within seconds: hello, and would you like an exclusive track?

STEP 03

First-party capture

They say yes and leave an email address. It belongs to the artist, not to the platform it came from.

STEP 04

The email

An introduction to the artist and the demo they were promised, sent straight away.

STEP 05

They listen

Someone who followed an hour ago has now heard something nobody else has.

STEP 06

The voice note

An Instagram voice note, in the artist's own voice — which is where the automation hands over to a person.

“Hey — obviously this was automated. But I'm a real person, and I'm glad you're here. I'm in my DMs if you want to say hey.”

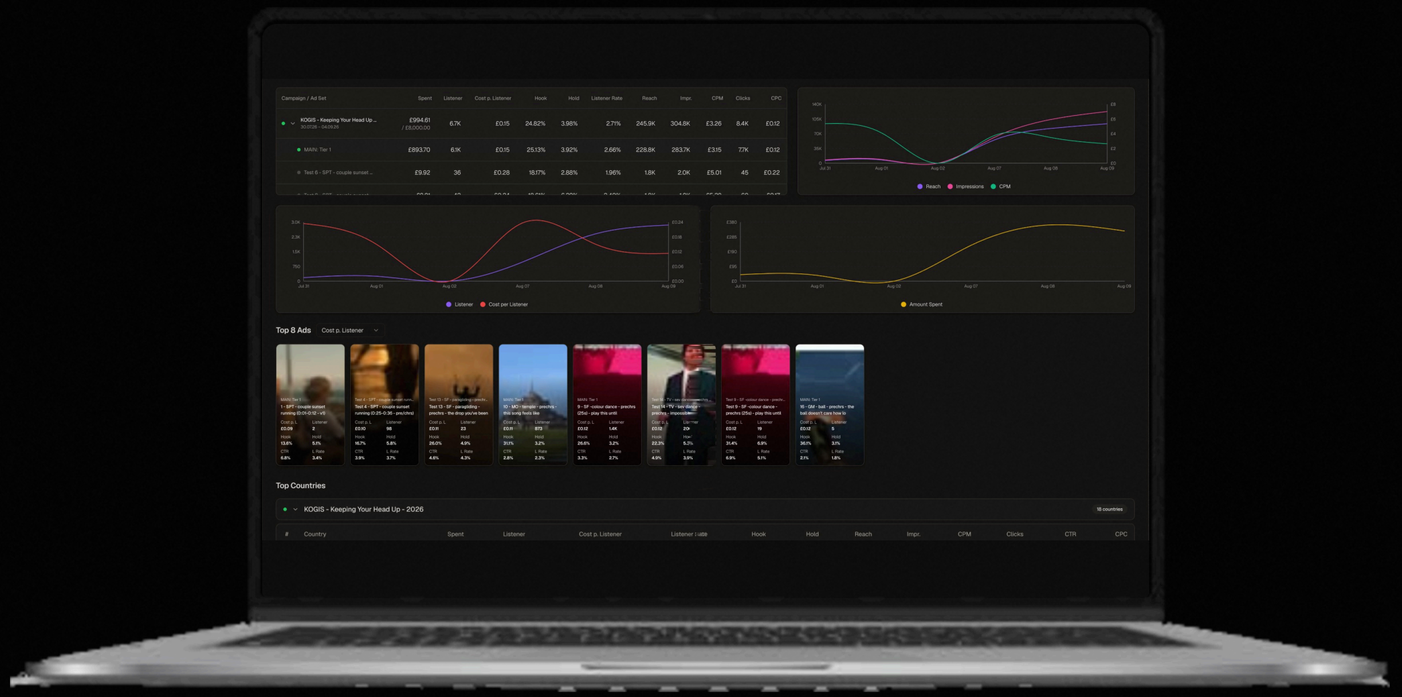

Admitting it is what makes the rest of the sequence survive a fan who can tell. Everything before this runs on its own; the artist records the voice note once.

A dashboard, daily.

Not a monthly report.

Sweat.fm is our own platform, not a third-party dashboard. Every campaign, every cost per result, every market, updated daily and visible to your whole team — so nobody is waiting on a deck to find out what the money did.

THE ENGAGEMENT

Pricing is scoped to the work.

No tiers. At this level the mix is different for everyone — a tour on sale, a record cycle, a store doing real numbers, or all three inside the same quarter. A fixed package either overcharges for the quiet months or under-resources the loud ones.

Tell us what's coming and what it needs to do, and we'll come back with a scope, a plan per channel and a number.

01

What's coming

The next twelve months — releases, tour, drops, and what's already committed.

02

What's running now

Where the spend sits today, who is placing it, and what it's returning.

03

What it has to do

The number that would make the year a success, so the plan is built backwards from it.
