THE TARGET, IN YOUR WORDS

10,000 a day.

Two or three thousand plays a day to justify the signing, ten thousand to call it a win. This proposal is about one thing only: what each of those plays costs you, and how much lower that number can go.

WHERE YOU ARE

None of this needs fixing.

Reach

650,000 followers across the Spotify playlists and 250,000 on SoundCloud, built over ten years from a blog rather than bought.

Cadence

Two releases every two weeks, so every record gets a fortnight of actual promotion rather than a launch day.

Discipline

Tier one only — US, UK, France, Sweden, Germany — and a deliberate no to the markets where the traffic is cheap and the royalty is a tenth.

Infrastructure

A Meta pixel that has been learning for five years, HypeEdit for the links, and VPN checks on the playlist positions worldwide.

Strategy

Per-single spend on top of the playlist budget, because it moves passive listeners into active ones and that is what feeds Discovery Mode.

Roster

Ninety-odd artists, and an autumn that opens with Hernán Cattáneo and a six-million-monthly-listener release.

There is one number in the whole operation with real room left in it, and it is the cost.

(14 to 30 cents)

The spread is the opportunity. Your worst market already costs twice your best one.

That is not a criticism of how the campaigns are run — it is what happens when the creative is fixed and only the targeting moves. The band tells you the audience is reachable at fourteen; what it does not tell you is which sound, which edit and which second of the record got you there, because only a handful of variations ever ran.

THE SAME €6,000 A MONTH

A third off pays for us. The rest is yours.

20¢

TODAY, MID-BAND

30,000 results a month.

13¢

BREAK-EVEN

The same 30,000 results, and the fee has paid for itself.

10¢

TIER ONE, TYPICAL

60,000 results for the same money.

A third is less than the distance you already cover. Fourteen to thirty is a spread of more than half. We are proposing to close a third of it — and to find out inside a week rather than argue about it. Ten cents is where we normally land in tier one on playlist campaigns; it is a projection on your numbers, not a promise, which is exactly why the next section is a test.

01 Find the sound

Every section of the record runs against a control visual until one of them wins on cost. The hook stops being an opinion.

BONOBO

02 Test the content at scale

Up to twenty-five pieces per release, built from the audio alone. You send us the track; nothing else is asked of the artist.

03 Read the country, not just the cost

If the US converts at fourteen and Germany at sixteen but Germany listens 0.7 times more, the spend belongs in Germany. Cheapest and most valuable are rarely the same market.

04 Advertise into the playlist

New track in the top five, then drive to the song in its playlist context rather than on its own. It reads as discovery instead of an advert, and the save rate goes with it.

WHAT YOU ASKED FOR

Three campaigns, with the cost on them.

Anonymised, as agreed on the call — the names are blurred, the numbers are not, and every figure is read straight off the account beside it.

Two things to read them with. All three are release campaigns rather than playlist campaigns, which are a different and cheaper exercise — the sub-ten figure on page seven is the playlist number. And each is shown in the currency the account ran in, so twelve pence is nearer fourteen of your cents than ten.

DANCE SINGLE · FIRST THREE WEEKS

0 to 18K daily streams in 3 weeks.

£3K spend · 12p CPR

A cold start on a dance record: 243,611 streams to 140,514 listeners, with fifteen thousand playlist adds and twelve thousand saves inside the first three weeks.

CATALOGUE SINGLE, RELEASED 2015

4.3M streams in 28 days on a 2015 record.

£4K spend · 18p CPR

Averaged 155K streams a day, up 14.1% on the month before. Eleven years old and still moving — catalogue doesn't decay on its own, it decays when nobody works it.

CATALOGUE TRACK · SIX MONTHS

76K to 300K monthly listeners.

$1K–$3K a month · $0.11 CPR

No new release and no new recording. A back-catalogue track that was already half-working, proved out at $1K a month and scaled to $3K at peak — topping out around 2M monthly streams.

Most records won't be the one.

Two releases a fortnight is fifty-two a year. A €200 test over forty-eight to seventy-two hours tells us which of them deserve the fortnight of promotion you were going to give them anyway.

Plenty of agencies will spend a budget for as long as you keep approving it. We won't.

The value isn't in the records we scale. It's in the ones we stop.

WHAT DOES NOT CHANGE

We are not asking to run your label.

01

The playlists stay yours

You said you prefer to curate them yourselves, and you should — ten years of brand is not something an agency should be handed. We advertise to them. We do not touch what goes in them.

02

Your Meta account, your pixel

Everything runs inside your own business account, so five years of pixel learning keeps compounding and the audiences stay yours the day this ends.

03

HypeEdit stays until it loses

Ours reports deeper, but yours has worked for five years. Run both across the test and keep whichever reads truer — that is a decision for the data, not for this document.

04

You keep promoting too

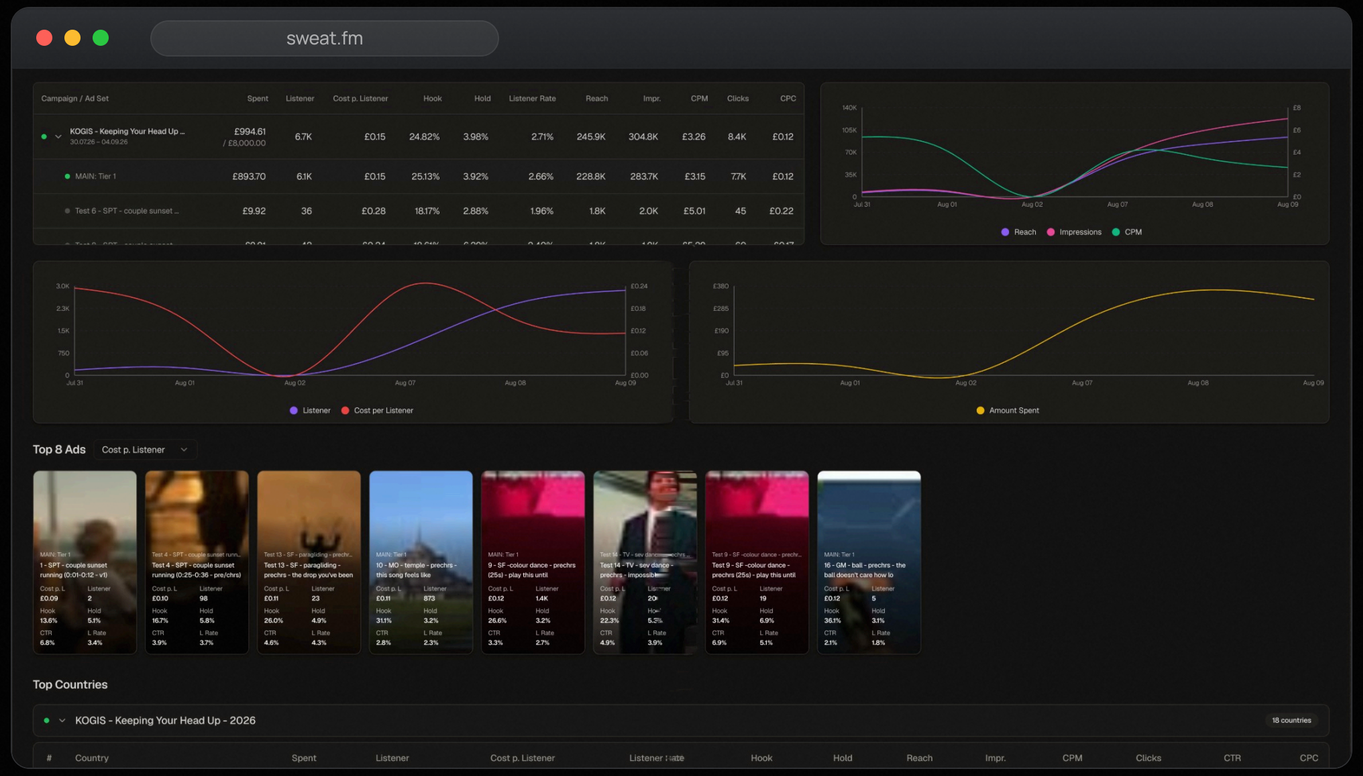

You said you want to keep control of some of it. Good — that is what makes the comparison worth anything. Run yours beside ours on the same window and read the two numbers.

A dashboard, daily.

Every release on it.

Sweat.fm is our own platform rather than a third-party dashboard. Every test, every cost per result, every market, updated daily. Creative comes to you as a link — you click approve and the system does the rest.

Start with the autumn

THE PILOT

Three singles. Run beside your own.

Pick three from the autumn schedule. We test each one the way we would test any record, you keep running yours the way you always have, and at the end of the window there are two cost-per-result numbers on the same table.

01

You send audio

Three tracks and nothing else. No briefs, no assets, no time from the artists.

02

Live in 24 hours

Every section of every track, against a control visual, on a €200 test spend each.

03

Read in 72 hours

A real cost per result per track, by country, and a straight recommendation on which to scale.

04

You compare

Against the fourteen to thirty you already know. If we do not beat it, you have lost a fortnight and learned something.

THEN THE RETAINER

10% of ad spend.
€2,000 a month minimum.

That covers the playlist campaigns and every release in the month — testing, creative, the country reads and the dashboard. Ad spend is separate and stays yours, paid to Meta directly out of your own account.

€2K
UP TO €20,000 OF SPEND

10%
ABOVE THAT

You said you don't spend €20,000 a month, and you don't have to. At €6,000 the minimum is what you pay, which is why the break-even on page seven matters more than the rate does — the fee is meant to come out of the saving, not out of the budget. The headroom is there for the months the autumn earns it.

Before October swallows it.

You said you were taking these meetings now because autumn gets swamped. Three tracks and a start date is all the pilot needs, and September is the last month it fits in.

01

Pick three from the autumn schedule.

02

Send the audio — nothing else.

03

Live within 24 hours, read within the week.

04

Compare the number, then decide about the playlists.
