You can't optimise four assets

A few edits go out. Nobody ever finds out whether a different one would have worked better.

That isn't a criticism of the team — it's what the workflow allows. Assets arrive, spend goes behind them, and the numbers come back after the money's gone. When it underperforms there's no way to tell whether it was the record, the audience or the edit, because only a handful ever ran.

We don't launch creative. We find out which creative works, then launch that.

01

Content at scale

Dozens of edits per record, not the handful you were handed.

02

Cost driven down

Volume is what gets a cost per result low. A handful can't find the winner.

03

A straight read

We tell you what's working and what isn't, and which of the two the record is.

04

Days, not quarters

Live in 24 hours, read within the week, while the release window is still open.

Every campaign launched inside a day.

Send us a record and it's testing tomorrow, not next month. Every test comes back with a validated cost per new listener, so the decision to scale is arithmetic rather than an argument.

A daily dashboard means you're never waiting on a report to find out what your money did.

01 Find the sound

We test every part of the record to see which seconds actually stop someone scrolling.

02 Test the content at scale

Dozens of variations per record, made by our editors, running against cold audiences in every market that matters.

03 Validate the cost

Every test returns a real cost per new listener. That number decides what gets the budget and what gets dropped.

04 Scale what converts

Budget follows the number, reallocated daily, country by country, for as long as it keeps paying.

Most records won't be the one.

We'll tell you which ones aren't, in days rather than quarters, and move the budget to the next record on the list.

Plenty of agencies will spend a marketing budget for as long as you keep approving it. We won't.

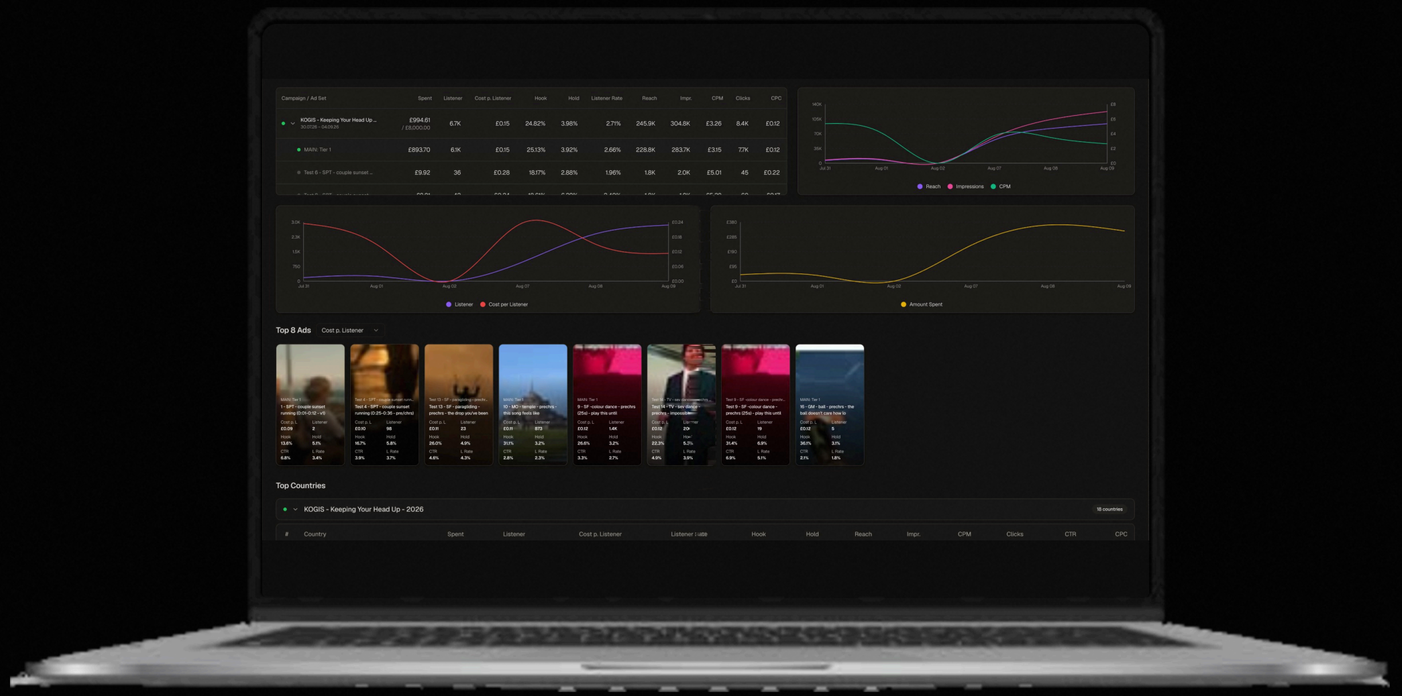

The value isn't in the records we scale. It's in the ones we stop.
