THE BRIEF, IN ONE LINE

We need a central cog.

There is a good team around this record already. What there isn't is one operation holding the whole of it — and that is the job we are proposing to take.

WHAT IS ALREADY IN PLACE

This campaign is already well staffed.

Creative

A dedicated creative director. Artwork, formats and direction finished. Videos already shot in Tokyo and Paris.

PR

Lucid, already delivering — you described the recent coverage as strong positioning.

UGC

We Generate and Something Something running creator and burner activity.

Community

An active Discord, managed by Jess at q3p — one of the few genuinely busy artist communities in this space.

Streaming

DSP pitching covered twice over: Red Light internally, and Broke on the distribution side.

Rollout

Social handled in-house, with a second opinion when you want one — which is how you said you wanted it.

Six specialists, all good at their part. Nobody whose job is the space between them.

THE ROLE

THE ORCHESTRATOR

One plan, one calendar, one person to chase.

We sit above the partners rather than beside them. Everyone keeps doing what they are good at; we hold the plan they all work to, and we own the parts that currently have no owner.

01

Project management

One calendar across Lucid, We Generate, Jess, the creative director and Broke. Deadlines set, assets chased, dependencies flagged before they bite.

02

Paid media

We run it. Conversion testing per record, scaled on the cuts and territories that actually respond.

03

First-party data

Capture flows into Laylo and the Discord, so the audience this era builds is owned rather than rented.

04

Physical

Vinyl and CD organised end to end — spec, quotes, plant, test pressings, delivery dates that hold.

And a written report every week, so you can see all of it from one page.

THE CAMPAIGN

September to Christmas

THE SHAPE OF IT

Three releases, one era.

SEPTEMBER 4

internet is not safe

The era opens. A new sound, so a new audience read.

OCTOBER 2

don’tneedtoknow

With Baobei. Two audiences to test into, not one.

NOVEMBER 20

digitalEscape + album

Focus single into naturecore. Physical lands here.

DECEMBER

The album campaign

Scaling what worked, into the Christmas window.

JANUARY

Handover

Everything documented, the audience owned and warm.

One date is already tight. Vinyl lead times run 12–16 weeks and it is August. If physical is to land with the album on 20 November, the specification and the order need signing off in the first fortnight of this engagement — which is the first thing we would do.

RELEASE 01 OF 03

September 4

internet is not safe

A new sound needs a new audience read — not the old one carried over.

Øneheart's existing audience arrived through ambient. naturecore moves into techno and hyper-pop, and the safe assumption — that the same listeners follow — is the one that quietly costs a campaign its first six weeks. This release is where we find out who the record is actually for, on a budget small enough that being wrong is cheap.

01

Test the record itself

Intro, verse, bridge, chorus, second verse — every section against a control visual, to find the part of the song that stops the scroll.

02

Read the new audience

Interest and lookalike sets built from the electronic side rather than the ambient one, run against each other rather than assumed.

03

Capture from day one

The follow-to-DM flow live at release, so the audience this record finds is kept rather than rented for a week.

RELEASE 02 OF 03

October 2

don’tneedtoknow

featuring Baobei

A feature is two audiences. Most campaigns only ever buy one of them.

The collaboration is the mechanism here. Baobei’s audience has never been asked to care about Øneheart and should be addressed on its own terms, with its own creative and its own read — not folded into one campaign and averaged. The video is already shot, which means the month is spent on distribution rather than production.

01

Split the read

Baobei’s audience and Øneheart’s run as separate tests, so we learn which one the record actually travels through.

02

Cut for each

The winning sound from September, re-cut against the new video for both audiences rather than one master edit for everyone.

03

Compound September

Everyone captured on the first single is warm for this one — the second release is the first time the list earns its keep.

RELEASE 03 OF 03

November 20

digitalEscape + naturecore

featuring ledbyher · subject to clearance

The album is where the three months are supposed to add up.

Everything learned in September and October — the sound that works, the audience it works on, the territories that respond — is spent here rather than started here. Physical lands with the record, the positioning push runs alongside it, and the campaign carries through the Christmas window rather than stopping on release day.

01

Scale, don't start

Budget weighted to the album because by 20 November we know what to weight it toward.

02

Physical on the date

Vinyl and CD in hand, D2C live, the drop pushed to the list and the Discord first.

03

Hold through December

Album campaigns die on release day by default. The spend keeps running into the strongest listening fortnight of the year.

04

Cover the clearance risk

If ledbyher does not clear, the slot needs a plan rather than a gap. We hold a version of the month that works either way.

HOW THE PAID MEDIA WORKS

We test the song, not just the ad.

Every section of the record is run against a control visual until one of them outperforms the rest. Then twenty-five cuts are built to that sound. As spend scales, our own tooling reads Spotify for Artists alongside the ad platform, so territories are chosen on where the record is genuinely resonating rather than on whichever market is briefly cheapest.

01

Test every part of the song

02

25 cuts to the winner

STREAMS PER LISTENER

134K streams a day averaged to 8 million listeners, with 1.16 million playlist adds and 656,650 saves. Six streams per listener is an audience that came back rather than passing through once — which is the thing naturecore is trying to build.

BEYOND THE STREAMING NUMBER

Where he sits matters as much as what he does.

You were clear that editorial, press and a stage like Boiler Room or the Elevator Series are worth as much to this era as the streams are. We are not going to claim we book those. What we can do is make them easier to say yes to, and make sure the people pitching have something current to pitch with.

01

Evidence, kept current

A live picture of momentum — audience, territories, engagement — that Lucid and Red Light can put in front of a booker or an editor in the week it matters, not a month later.

02

Credibility in the room

Spend weighted toward the electronic audience that these platforms actually come from, so the numbers say the right thing about who is listening.

03

A plan that survives the visa

Touring is unresolved and may stay that way this year. Nothing in this campaign depends on a live date — if one lands, we turn spend onto it inside a week.

THE AUDIENCE YOU KEEP

Five months of spend should leave something behind.

A campaign that ends with a streaming number and nothing else has rented an audience. This one ends with a list, a Discord that grew, and a direct line to the people who came in through naturecore — which is what the next record starts from.

STEP 01

A new follower

Someone follows the account off the back of a video or an ad. That is the whole trigger.

STEP 02

An automatic DM

A message within seconds — hello, and an offer of something they cannot get anywhere else.

STEP 03

First-party capture

They leave an email. It belongs to Øneheart, not to the platform that introduced them.

STEP 04

The drop

Laylo handles the release-day push to that list, so the audience is owned rather than rented.

STEP 05

Into the Discord

The most engaged land where Jess already runs an active community — the deepest tier of the world.

VINYL AND CD

The physical is a deadline, not a decision.

Artwork and formats are already finished, which removes the slowest part. What remains is a manufacturing schedule that has to start now to land on 20 November. We have run this many times and know the plants worth using.

01

Spec and quote

Formats, weights, colourways, quantities. Three quotes, a recommendation, and a number you sign off once.

02

Plant and proofs

Artwork delivered to the plant's template, test pressings checked and approved, nothing left to a courier's word.

03

Into the store

D2C set up and stocked, pre-order live in good time, fulfilment arranged before the record lands rather than after.

04

Sold, not just made

The drop goes to the list and the Discord first, with paid support behind it — the same discipline as the record.

Manufacturing costs sit outside this fee and are yours at cost — we organise and carry the schedule, you own the stock.

HOW WE WORK

One page, every week

WHO DOES WHAT

One team, and one person accountable.

Peter Jarrett ORCHESTRATOR

Sits above the campaign and is accountable for it as a whole — the plan, the partners, and anything that slips. In the room for the decisions that matter.

Senior Marketing Director

Tobias Steinborn

Holds the campaign across Lucid, We Generate, Jess and the creative director. Runs the weekly, chases the assets, and owns the manufacturing schedule end to end.

Campaign Strategist

Oskar

Plans each release — what gets tested, against which audiences, and what the result means for the next one. Also owns the capture flows into Laylo and the Discord.

Paid media

Holly

Daily hands on the accounts. Builds the tests and the cuts, kills what is not working and scales what is, across all three releases.

2026 Sweat Strategies. All rights reserved.
Confidential and proprietary information.

REPORTING

Every Monday, without being asked.

A written report each week and a half-hour call whenever you want one. You should never have to chase us for a number, and you should never learn about a problem on the day it lands.

01

What ran

Spend, cost per result, the cuts and territories working and the ones we have turned off.

02

What the record did

Streams, saves and the algorithmic picture, read against the spend rather than beside it.

03

Where the partners are

PR, UGC, Discord, physical — one line each, on track or not, with the blocker named.

04

What is next

The week ahead and anything that needs a decision from you, with the date it is needed by.

FROM YOUR SIDE

Four things and we can start.

01

The media budget confirmed

You mentioned the spend sits with Broke. We need the figure and the sign-off route, because the September test has to be live before the 4th.

02

Access

Ad accounts, Spotify for Artists, Meta business assets, and the audio and video for all three releases.

03

An introduction to each partner

Lucid, We Generate and Jess. One thread each, so the first weekly has everyone already in the room.

04

A decision on physical

Yes or no inside the first fortnight. After that, 20 November stops being achievable and the conversation changes.

2026 Sweat Strategies. All rights reserved.
Confidential and proprietary information.

THE ENGAGEMENT

Five months, two ways to do it.

MONTHLY

£5,000pcm

Five payments across the term. £25,000 in total, invoiced monthly from the start date.

TWO PAYMENTS

£20,000

£10,000 on day one and £10,000 on day 75. The same five months of work for £5,000 less — committing up front is worth something to us, so it is worth something to you.

This is the fee only. Ad spend, any third-party software the campaign needs — Manychat, Laylo and the like — and manufacturing all sit on top, billed at cost. We never mark up any of them. September to January, covering all three releases and the album.

The first single is three weeks out.

If this is the right shape, the useful next step is a short call to confirm the budget route and the physical decision — both of those set the first fortnight.

01

A call this week to confirm scope and budget.

02

Access granted, partners introduced.

03

Physical specced and ordered.

04

September tests live before the 4th.
